Presentation styles

Visual style

- Strategy: Slides simply exist to complement your talking points
- Challenges:
 - You need to be a strong speaker for engaging your audience
 - Visual slides needed
- When to use it:
 - When speaking to a large audience with broad interests
 - (When you do not have time to prepare detailed slides but have some visuals to show)

Presentation styles

Instructor style

- Strategy:
 - High-impact visuals and facts/numbers to support your ideas and keep the audience engaged
 - Speaker relies on strong stories to illustrate each point
- Challenges:
 - You need the visuals and the facts
 - You need to master your presentation tool
- When to use it:
 - When you want to convince your audience based on evidence
 - When you are not fully familiar with your subject/matter

Coach style

- Strategy:
 - Sharing of experience and knowledge with many examples and anecdotes
 - Visual inputs (e.g. slides, photos) only supportive function
- Challenge:
 - You need to be an energetic and charismatic speaker that has a lot of experiences to share
- When to use it:
 - When you want to sell you and/or an idea
 - When presenting to an audience who needs to be put at ease (e.g. opening speech or key note at a conference)

Story telling style

- Strategy:
 - Speaker relies on anecdotes and examples to connect with audience
 - Story is told in an emotional and honest way
 - Objects are often used for complementing the story told
- Challenge:
 - Only works if you have a good story to tell
- When to use it:
 - Conference speaking, networking events
 - Expert or mixed audiences possible

What is a presentation?

- Please discuss in groups of 2 for 2 minutes
 - Identify 3 key characteristics of a presentation

“A structured, prepared and speech-based means of communicating information or ideas to a group of interested people, in order to inform or persuade them.”

(commonly used definition, source unknown)
